Ring One Report

Edited by Sandy

On August 11, 2025, one of Ring 1's talented magicians, Gary S. Chan, was asked to perform strolling magic at the Penske Racing Museum in Phoenix, AZ. He dutifully prepped strolling pieces and had his best close-up material ready. The plan was simple: the emcee would open with some remarks, and then Gary would wander through the crowd, enchanting small groups at a time. Easy, right? Fifteen minutes before showtime, Gary was told he would start at the back of the room, and he double-checked the plan with the emcee. But then the great magician's nemesis struck ... last minute changes! The original emcee vanished (without even a puff of smoke), replaced by someone Gary had never spoken with. When the new emcee wrapped up his speech, he looked out at the crowd, smiled confidently, and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, please welcome... GARY S. CHAN, our stage mentalist! He's here to perform a full show for you—right now!" And the emcee proceeds to hand Gary a *handheld* microphone, meaning he was limited to effects using one hand. Spotlight. Applause. Confusion. Gary had been set up perfectly... for the wrong show. His strolling material sat abandoned at the far end of the room while he was suddenly the headliner. What followed was less "evening of carefully crafted deception" and more "tightrope walk without a net." Gary improvised an impromptu stage mentalism act on the spot. Fortunately, in true magical fashion, the audience never saw the chaos behind the curtain.

On September 3rd, Ring One held its annual Magic Competition. It was a huge success as we had more than 75 in attendance. It looks like the Ring might have to begin searching for a new facility that can safely hold a larger crowd. While other organizations across our country seem to be losing members, Ring One is continually growing. Tim Shegitz was the emcee, an honor bestowed upon him since he won the competition last year. James Hodge and Sandy Weis were the judges, along with a lay judge, Kate Smith (granddaughter of the late Harley Day). Michael W. McClure served as the timekeeper. The acts were instructed to be between six to eight minutes. Points were deducted if the magician's act was less than six minutes or more than eight. Following were the contestants--Gary S. Chan performed a nice mentalism act where he used an audio/video presentation on the big screen. Bob Danner showcased his talent and wit in a delightful close-up card act. Steve Finkelstein once again amazed the audience and judges with an impossible 52 card management gambling effect. Kevin DesRosiers provided a creative original act that delighted the packed house. Jeffrey Halcomb treated our guests to two different card acts rolled into one presentation. Raleigh Muns customized an original act that involved miniature card decks and the smallest magician we have ever seen. Steve Queen displayed polish and poise as he combined the appearance of a full can of Red Bull with a smooth razor blade swallowing act. Zi Teng Wang amazed everyone with an impossible card divination effect ... a one-way trip to placing him as one of the top three acts of the evening. Zia Shi bravely invited two of our youngest guests to assist him in a card act that was both toughing and fun. Matthew Horowitz displayed the most enthusiastic card act that the evening offered. Joshua Weidner opened with his comedy routine and managed to escape from both handcuffs and his dinner jacket. Reggie Dunn gave us a commanding performance as he plucked cards and coins and balls from thin air. Every performance was unique and very entertaining. The following were the winners--1st place--Bob Danner, 2nd place--Zi Teng Wang, and 3rd place--Steve Finkelstein. In honor of winning the top award, Bob Danner will be the host for the 2026 Magic Competitions. The Ring congratulates all the winners and thanks every contestant for providing such an entertaining evening. Our continued thanks go out to Michael W. McClure and his wife Susan for everything they do to make the meetings a huge success. Mike's advertising efforts have brought many new guests to our meetings. Since last December we have signed up new members at every regular meeting we've held!
